

The mechanical self-locking swing-out style gripper rail coupling is designed for manual coupling of gripper rails on transfer presses. A short lift-out stroke is required for changing the tool. An axial stroke is required in the event of additional centering with pins. The coupling consists of a hard anodized aluminum housing, a swiveling tensioning rod and a self-locking eccentric cam gearing. This configuration allows high clamping forces and features a high dynamic rigidity with minimum mass.