Rev. 19-0923 Page 1 of 1 Uncontrolled Document

The mechanical self-locking gripper rail coupling is designed for manual coupling of gripper rails on transfer presses. A vertical life-out stroke is required for changing the tool. The coupling consists of a hard anodized aluminum housing, an axially movable tensioning rod and a self-locking eccentric cam gearing. This configuration allows high clamping forces and features a high dynamic rigidity with minimum mass.